Your site has some serious problems that are worth fixing soon. A broken page, a missing secure connection and failing scripts could be costing you visitors and enquiries, and a form and some accessibility gaps add to that.

What to fix first

1. A page on your site shows an error instead of loading

HIGH

Lost visitors · 1 page

WHY IT MATTERS

Visitors who land on this page see an error or a blank screen and are likely to leave without getting what they came for.

WHAT TO DO

Ask your web developer to fix the page or redirect it to a working one, and check that no links on your site point to it.

2. Your site isn't fully protected by a secure connection

HIGH

Trust and security · 1 page

WHY IT MATTERS

Browsers can warn visitors that the site isn't secure, which hurts trust and can lower your search ranking.

WHAT TO DO

Ask your web host or developer to make sure every page is served securely and that visitors are always sent to the secure version.

3. Behind-the-scenes errors are happening on a page

HIGH

Features that may not work · 1 page

WHY IT MATTERS

These errors often mean a button, menu or form quietly stops working for some visitors, so you may lose business without noticing.

WHAT TO DO

Ask your developer to look at the affected page, fix the errors, and test the buttons and forms there afterwards.

4. A form on your contact page isn't working as it should

MEDIUM

Lost enquiries and sales · 1 page

WHY IT MATTERS

If the form accepts bad entries or rejects good ones, customers can't reach you or buy, and you lose enquiries without knowing.

WHAT TO DO

Submit the form yourself with correct and incorrect details, then ask your developer to fix whatever behaves wrongly.

5. Some visitors may struggle to use parts of your site

MEDIUM

Accessibility and legal risk · 1 page

WHY IT MATTERS

People using screen readers or only a keyboard may get stuck, which loses you customers and carries a growing legal risk.

WHAT TO DO

Ask your developer to fix the accessibility problems on the affected page and check the rest of the site for similar ones.
